

Trees, Please!

Trees play a very important role along the Saugus River. They shade the river and help keep the water temperature cooler for the many species of fish found here. They also serve as habitat for song birds, birds of prey, and small mammals that live along the river.

The Saugus Iron Works Nature Trail is a short trail along the banks of the river. On the trail, seven different types of trees are labeled. Take a walk down the trail. Can you find the seven different trees?

While on the trail, do you hear anything? What else did you see or hear? Can you believe there are 42 different types of birds that can be found here? There are some great pictures in the Visitor's Center to help you learn about the birds you saw! Make some notes, draw a picture!
